Join us for an intimate discussion with historian, Western mystic, presidential campaign advisor, and ex-atheist William Lemieux, with Q&A following, and CD sale & signing.

In Christian and Judaic scripture, the name of God is "I Am Who Am. I Am That I Am." Mystics throughout the ages have learned that "That I Am" is both a statement and a question, and the question touches on the experience of our becoming. Life fulfillment comes when one can live both outside and inside of what society says they should be, while simultaneously allowing God's Love to guide their experience of becoming. As a person of faith, how does one make a decision to believe in God, to trust God, and allow God to take a journey into their becoming?

Join Western mystic and presidential campaign advisor William Lemieux in a riveting presentation into the depths of "That I Am." Hear how he discovered God in a debate with an atheist, how his own disbelief turned to faith, and his ongoing process of discovering where God is and how he finds God speaking back to him. You'll learn why social controls limit experience and you'll discover why everyone struggles to find God in their lives. If you want more joy, more laughter, and more intimacy in your relationship with God and neighbor, you do not want to miss out on this presentation.
